PROGRAM IN TABERNACLE

Memorial Day Fittingly Commemorated by G. A. R. and Citizens Generally.

ORATION BY JUDGE HOWELL.

Grand Tribute to Old Soldiers—Momentous Problem Arising From Combination of Wealth to be Solved.

Ogden, May 30.—Under the direction of the Grand Army of the Republic, appropriate Memorial day exercises were carried out at the Ogden tabernacle this morning. After the rendition of the program, the veterans visited the two cemeteries and decorated the graves of the comrades.

Judge J. A. Howell delivered the oration, a part of which follows:

"Men of the Grand Army of the Republic and Fellow Citizens—

"This day is the one day of all the year when the people of this great land of ours assemble together to render reverent homage, not to some particular great man in our history, the anniversary of whose death it is, but to all those who have passed into the valley of the shadow of death, it is the day upon which all the living lovingly remember all the dead and in solemn assemblage with appropriate ceremonies, renewing their obligations to their predecessors, transmit to the generations that are to come the great traditions and ideals of the past.

"The significance of this day has gradually broadened, as it was at its inception, to commemorating the lives of those who took part in the great civil war, it is set apart to the remembrance of all the soldiers of all our wars, of the Revolution, of the war of 1812, the Mexican, the Civil, both those who were the blue and those who were the gray, and even our late war with Spain. Not only is it devoted to the remembrance of those who served their country on the battle field, but all those who have contributed to the making of our civilization, and even those who, though unknown to fame, were kith or kin or friends to us, whom we hold in loving remembrance, to whom we owe a debt of personal gratitude for which we can never sufficiently recompense them.

"It is well that this day is so broad in purpose, because many a grave that would have been neglected is now at least on one day in the year made beautiful, a custom that will endure as long as the republic, as long as mankind acknowledges its indebtedness to the past, which means for all time.

"Judge Howell continued at some length his patriotic address, and paid a high tribute to the old soldiers of the Civil war, which, he said, "was the greatest war in all history, not simply because of the number of men engaged, though even from that point of view its immensity outdid the records of history, but because of the object for which it fought—because it was to determine the destiny of the nation which had become the hope of mankind. The men of the south fought bravely for a cause in which they honestly believed and surrendered bravely when defeated—and we honor them today because of it; if we honor the men of the south because they were actuated by sincere motives, however wrong, how much more should we honor our men who fought for the Union, because you were not only induced to fight from patriotic motives, but because your cause was right, you were engaging in no war of conquest to bring the vanquished to your feet, but you were fighting to restore your brothers to your side, you were maintaining the perpetuity of a government of free institutions, and the results of your victory will endure for all time."

He spoke further on the achievements of the American armies in putting down oppression in Cuba, the freeing the Philippines from the tyranny of Spain, and the establishing of free American institutions beyond the seas. "As a legacy of the Spanish war," he said, "we had thrust upon us the responsibility of the government of possessions far distant from our shores, and we have set ourselves the task of preparing them for the reception of our institutions and laws. Just as in the past we have sent missionaries all over the world to preach the gospel of Christ, so now we are going to send missionaries to the ends of the earth to our island possessions, to inculcate in the inhabitants thereof the principles of free government.

"Speaking of modern conditions and problems which confront the nation he said: "The greed of wealth and the anarchy of ignorance form the greatest problem this nation has had to face since the abolition of slavery. It is another great stain upon our national life and equally with slavery it must be forever blotted out. These great combinations and powerful systems, covered with a veil of corporate existence which has hidden the men behind them, have not only not hesitated to violate the laws of the land, but they have come to consider themselves above them and by the corruption of public officials by the election to office of their own servants, or men who are their willing tools, they have sought to undermine the representative character of our government. These mighty corporations, organized and developed in crime, have enmeshed not only one state, but all the states in their spider-like web, and therefore the problem, being beyond the power of the individual states to solve, must be solved by the nation. It is curious that we hear the same cry against the legislation recently enacted by Congress to this end and the legislation it is proposed to enact that in the days of your youth you heard the efforts of our fathers to suppress the traffic in human souls—that it interferes with the rights of the individual states; but if the Civil war taught any lesson at all, it is that when an evil becomes so great that it threatens the life of the nation, the nation has a right to remedy it. When any man or set of men attempt to subvert the government, when any man or set of men seek to overturn it, then in consonance with the principles upon which this government is founded it has a right to stamp them out.

"As I have said, there has sounded no call to arms to settle this great conflict and there is no reason why there should be, for it can be settled peacefully, but that was also true of slavery, and we must remember that there were worse plagues than war, so long as it be in a righteous cause. Rather than that this republic should degenerate into an oligarchy of the rich, that this democracy should become a despotism of the powerful, or an anarchy of the ignorant, let us have war. This much is certain, that even if war is necessary to prevent it, never over this nation of ours shall there wave the black flag of greed; nor shall the red flag of anarchy be unfurled, but over us and our children and our children's children there shall always float that same starry flag of red, white and blue, which now signifies and must continue to signify
